

St Nicholas may host major Stained Glass Exhibition

At a time when our own windows are needing much attention negotiations are progressing well for us to host an interesting exhibition about the history of Stained Glass. Planned by Claire Daunton (University of East Anglia) with photographs by Mike Dixon the exhibition reflects the distinctive Norwich school of medieval glass whilst looking at the development of stained glass over the period and the people and processes involved in its production.

Until recently the exhibition has been in Hungate Church in Norwich. More information about the exhibition can be found here
